

Collaborative Degrees

Collaborative Model 1: Single College Offers a Program (old practice, new twist)

- Student:
 - enrolls in home college for common core courses and electives.
 - enrolls in college approved to offer degree/certificate for discipline-specific courses
- Home college courses transfer to college awarding the degree/certificate.
- Collaborating Colleges sign collaborative degree/certificate agreement specifying who does what, special requirements, etc.

Collaborative Model 2: Multiple Colleges Offer Degree/Certificate

- Collaborating colleges' students:
 - enroll in home colleges for common core and electives
 - take discipline-specific courses from home and other collaborating colleges (hosted courses may count as locally-offered courses)

Degree/certificate awarded by home college
- Other colleges' students access program through Model 1. A student selects one of the degree-awarding colleges to receive credits transferred from the home college. Students may take courses specific to the degree/certificate from all collaborating program-approved colleges.

Collaborative Programs Available to Students

Colleges with approved online programs assess for themselves whether their programs can accommodate additional students and whether they want to open them for collaborative offering. They will list programs they elect to offer collaboratively at the VCT website so other colleges can be aware of them and, at their discretion, make them available to their own students.
